

Postcards from Maine

By Chuck Gullage

First part of September found me presiding over my sister's wedding ceremony in Ogunquit Maine. In my spare time I took some pictures of boats in Perkins Cove on the Cape Neddick River. No real story here other than after stopping to take pictures, I locked my keys in the truck. So I took a few more pictures while waiting for the AAA guy to arrive. The bridge over the cove is the only tourist operated bridge that anyone knows of. Incidentally, I did make it to the wedding on time and married my sister off in good order.

The tourist operated bridge at the mouth of Perkins Cove

View of the cove full of working boats.
Below, fine example of a Down East Lobster boat.
Page #3, lobster shack adjacent to the Cape Neddick Lobster Pound.
And a fellow transporting pots full of lobsters.
The pots in this case are worth more than the boat...!!!

